APC celebrates Buhari return in Enugu, Ekiti

Kenneth Ofoma and Suleiman Salawadeen

Members and leaders of the All Progressives Congress (APC) in Enugu and states yesterday held rallies which grounded business activities in the state to celebrate the return of President Muhammadu Buhari.

In Enugu, no fewer than 3,000 party members, who came to the capital city from different parts of the 17 local government areas of the state, marched through some major streets like New Haven, Independence Avenue among others, declared that Buhari's return would make positive impact in the nation's polity. The party faithful, who literally shut down the state capital as they marched through the roads, include the Director General of the Voice of Nigeria, Mr. Osita Okechukwu; the party's National Vice Chairman, Southeast, Chief Emma Eneukwu; party chairman in the state, Ben Nwoye and the party's gubernatorial candidate in the 2015 election in the state, Mr. Okey Eze. Others included a notable party leader and National Secretary of the defunct United Nigeria Congress Party (UNCP), Chief Gbazuagu Nweke Gbazuagu, party chairmen in the local government areas, women and youth leaders among others. Operating under the aegis of Buhari Support Organization (BSO), the party leaders said the return of the president was "a pleasant surprise" to them, noting that "even when anti-democracy forces wanted to laugh at us, God has confounded them".

Speaking at the BSO Secretariat along Bisala road, Independence lay-out before commencing the road march, Eneukwu, Eze, Okechukwu and Gbazuagu expressed delight that the president had returned insisting that with his return, his fight against anti-corruption and insurgency in some parts of the country sume on a higher tum. "We are celebrating the president's return. Atiku to Nigerians: Don't distract Buh

Johnchuks Onuanyim
ABUJA

Former Vice President and chieftain of the ruling All Progressives Congress (APC), Atiku Abubakar, has charged Nigerians not to raise issues that would distract President Muhammadu Buhari. The former Vice President stated this in a statement to welcome back the President from his medical leave in the United Kingdom, just as he expressed delight at his level of good health and recovery. According to the former Vice President, every well meaning Nigerian should be happy with the recovery of the President. He said: "A healthy and stronger Buhari would be able to concentrate more vigorously on the task of implementing his campaign promises to Nigerians." He explained that President Buhari's recovery is good news for the country and Nigerians because "it would reduce the needless conspiracy theories surrounding his health and long absence." He noted that the task of governance is so enormous that the country should celebrate the return of the President. Atiku advised Nigerians to help the President succeed "by focusing on issues that unite us than those that us, and thereby d ing the President attending to the hand." The form President also ca politicians agai promotion of ha tics for selfish ad es, adding that ation where Ni perceive one a as enemies rath brothers who sh united by their c interests is unl and inimical to mocracy."

PDP worried over Buhari's return - NI

A senior member of the ruling All Progressives Congress APC, Chief Sam Nkire, says the opposition party, the Peoples Democratic Party, PDP, appears to have gone into panic since the return of President Muhammadu Buhari from his medical vacation in London.

Reacting to the news of President Buhari's return at the weekend, the APC chieftain said there was evidence that the leadership and members of the PDP have been forced to taking over government. According to Nkire, some members of the opposition party at least agree that President Buhari's return has altered PDP's electoral calculations and dislocated their plans for 2019, making it imperative for them to tinker with their game plan.

Nkire said, however, that the good news was that President Buhari's return would certainly quicken the speed of the train taking Nigeria to the promised land, through radical changes in strategy and policy execu that the APC gov led by President would fulfil all c promises it made t ans, adding that, "Buhari is a man v tegrity you could t bank".
